- Rebecca McClelland 2023 -

Rebecca McClelland, a Career Practitioner at Fremantle College, has shared her experience and tips on how to promote career exploration and student and teacher engagement with the Career Taster Program (CTP); and the substantial benefits and outcomes for students.

My experience

- » Well received support from the school, matching the funding from the CTP.
- » Displayed information regarding the CTP across the school through newsletters, emails, Facebook and the school website.
- » Students are more engaged than ever – growing into very informed and proactive Year 10 students.
- » Subject and pathway selections have increased.

Stakeholder collaboration

- » There are so many opportunities to engage with stakeholders. Through meet and greets, presentations, and more. Career conversations are vital and promotion is the key to creating a buzz.

Career Champions

- » Create Career Champions by having teachers engage with the career taster experiences whenever the opportunity presents itself.
- » Continue to grow your Career Champion teachers group.
- » Talk to students about career opportunities at every opportunity.
- » Allow Career Champion Teachers to facilitate Career sessions to demonstrate learning.

Student learning

- » Ensure the career tasters are relevant to the students learning areas.
- » Integrate career learning and reflection across all subject areas.
- » Engage and incorporate student interest in career learning.
- » Facilitate in-class discussion and reflection.

Teacher learning

- » Use every career taster experience as a professional development opportunity.
- » Bring back the knowledge to create new and engaging career lessons.
